Bombs Explode in Three Cities

Campaign on Divorce Ends in Italy

ROME, May 10 (AP).-Pro and anti-divorce groups suspended their propaganda campaign at midnight today no a referendum that will let the voters decide the fate of Italy's divorce law.

Campaigning is harred tomorrow. On Sunday and until 2 p.m. Monday, an estimated 37.5 million Italians are expected to vote on whether to repeal this Roman Catholic nation's three-year-old divorce law.

On the last day of campaigning, three powerful bombs explod-ed in Ancona, Milan and Bologna, No serious injuries were reported. But the bombs wrecked the tex office in Ancona and damaged a commercial office in Bologna.

Police said they believed the explosions were set off by rightist extremists. But they said that they could not be certain if the bombs were connected with the

A flurry of noisy rallies continued in major cities today. Rome was littered by tons of leaflets-most of them urging that the law be retained.

Pope Paul VI, hreaking his silence on the referendum, told Italian hishops last night that he supports the view that marriages cannot be dissolved.

Italian bishops have called the divorce law "permissive" and urged their flocks to do away with tha statute that permits divorce after a separation of five years. So far, 66.641 Italian couples have obtained divorces, .

The Church-backed Christian Democratic party, Italy's largest political organization, and the neo-Pascist Social Movement also campaigned for the abrogation of

But all other political parties -from the Communists to the right-of-center Liberals-staged a vigorous campaign to uphold the law. Generally, they claimed that the divorce law did not force couples into divorce, but repealing it would force them to remain married.

The referendum campaign also strained the center-left govern-ing alliance of Christian Democratic Premier Mariano Rumor, He expressed confidence, however, that differences among coalition partners over divorce would not lead to the break-np of his administration—Italy's 36th government in three decades.

The referendum became a necessity when groups opposing divorce obtained 1.5 million voter

The Soviet Union offered indications today that it was accommodating Itself to the new leadership of Mr. Helmut Schmidt in West Germany but foresaw some difficulties ahead for Bonn's policy of accommodation with Eastern Europe espoused by Mr. Brandt.

A detailed and sober analysis of Chancellor Willy Brandt's departure by Pravda appeared calculated both to reassure Soviet readers that détente should not be affected by the sudden turn of events in West Germany and to encourage the chancellor's successor to maintain the Ostpolitik course set out by Mr. Brandt.

At the same time, the Communist party paper, in offering the first extensive public explanation here of Mr. Brandt's sudden resignation, avoided any mention of the spy scandal that prompted the chancellor to leave office.

Instead, Prayda echoed some earlier assertions made by Soviet officials here by maintaining that internal difficulties accentuated by 'unbridled propaganda cam-paigns, unceasing intrigues by reactionary forces and at times a direct hounding of Brandt and the cabinet ha headed played a definite part in what has taken

The report, to be considered by the House Government Operations Committee Tuesday, said the $17.1 million included $7.5 million in personnel costs, $5.6 million for communications, $2.2 million for administrative support and $1.7 million for protection

It still includes the findings, previously disclosed, that some of the spending was for items "far in excess of what was required to meet securify requests" and that some items were paid for by the government after they had already been procured by Mr. Nixon's aldes.

It also recommends that "appropriate government agencies should seek restitution or take other appropriate action with respect to any improper expendi-tures of federal funds."

Copies of the final draft were sent to committee members yes-terday and were numbered to discourage leaks, but the Associated Press was permitted to take notes from one copy.

The draft report also recom-mends that in the future permanent security be established at only one of a president's private homes, to be selected by him.

The report was said to have received the broad support of committee Republicans at a caucus yesterday morning because of a general softening of some of its language and the addition of more information on security costs at past presidents' homes

Several Republicans reached after the caucus said that their approval was not a turning away from Mr. Nixon but simply a basic approval of the report.

PARIS, May 10 .WP1.-Valcry Giscard d'Estaing and François Mitterrand tonight staged France's first live television debate between presidential candidates. but what had been billed as the turning point of the campaign proved something of a letdown.

break new ground appeared to have been dictated by a desire to avoid allerating the voters they won in the first-round ballot last Sunday by appealing too blatantly for runoff support from those who backed now-elinunated candidates.

Mr. Mitterrand, who is backed by the powerful Communist party, at the end of the debate made a direct, emotional, but vague appeal for support from those who had voted for other candidates. His special targel is the 15 percent of the electorals that

Only after journalist-arbiters of the state relevizion monopoly insisted din the candidates reluctantly and briefly discuss foreign affairs in a 10-minute "overtime" period.

The added oil costs and their future effect on France and the crisis of Europe were barely touched upon, as if the country were somehow an isolated island of calm. Rather, as in two sharper radio

However, unlike their past radio encounters. Mr. Giscard d'Estaing did not bother to contest Mr. Mitterrand's claims that inflation was now running at an annual rate of 17 percent.

Nor, did he contest Mr. Milterrand's assertion that the left's plans to nationalize nine large industrial groups over 20 years would cost $4 billion rather than $11.2 billion as the finance minister had once claimed.

Such points are not without their potential importance since Mr. Giscard d'Estaing has long been unchalleoged in his mas-tery of economic and financial Judge Reynolds called the ordinance irrational and a violation of the Constitution's equal-protection provisions.

The derice sounds a loud "Whoop! Whoop!-Pull up!" and thashes a red light saying "Ter-rain" if a plane is heading for a mountain slope or is straying too

Calif. Woman, 18, Denies a Role in U.K. Kidnap Plot

LONDON. May 10 IAP1.—An 18-year-old California woman today denied in court that she had a role in a plot to kidnap a French official as a hostage for the release of 30 Moroccan political prisoners.

Allison Thomoson, a former vailress and part-time model from Santa Barbara, was arrested two days after Christmas on arrival from Los Angeles at London Heathrow Airport. Customs officials said they found five pistols and ammunition in a false bottom of her trunk. She said she did not know the arms were in the trunk. On trial with her were Abdelkbir el-Hakkaoui, a 25-year-old Moroccan, and a 21-year-old Pakistani. Athar Naseem. Both were arrested in London soon after Miss Thompson had been stopped at the airport.

All three pleaded innocent to two charges of conspiracy with an American named Ted Brown, involving possession of firearms and ammunition. Mr. Brown was said to have returned to the United States before the arrests of Miss Thompson, Mr. Naseem and Mr. Hakkaoui.

Miss Thompson said Mr. Na-seem had told her that somebody would meet her at the airport and take the trunk. She said Mr. Brown and Mr. Naseem had given her the round-trip ticket to Lon-

The Removal of Mr. Nixon

there was a sudden burst of demands for President Nixon's resignation, we observed in this space (IHT, Nov. 7) that neither the time nor the circumstances was right. We stated then that an overwhelming case could be made for the President's removal from office, but that the case for resignation was not necessarily stronger than the case for allowing the impeachment process to proceed, and that events would doubtless clarify the issue before long. It struck us then, as it does now, that if the President were to resign It would be vital that the public be provided persuasive evidence of the case against his continuing to serve in office.

When the most dangerous variation on the theme of resignation was advanced—namely Sen, James Buckley's proposal that the President step down in an aura of innocence and without any publicly agreed upon findings one way or the other-we took particular issue with it. Today we are witnessing what might seem to be a replica of last November's outcry. However, events have in fact gone a considerable way toward resolving last fall's unsettled questions. There is now In the public domain, hy Mr. Nixon's own hand, a documentary record of presidential misconduct and moral failure which transcends political lines and ideological differences among the public. Testimony to this development may also he found in editorials from the Chicago Tribune and the Omana World-Tribune. These editorials, calling for impeachment or Mr. Nixon's resignation, are testimony to the fact that Richard Nixon, oy virtue of the records he himself has furnished of hls performance in office. has managed to alienate profoundly important parts of his constituency-those elements, in fact, who have first call on his consideration and the most acute grounds for disappointment. To the best of our knowledge and belief, as they say on the witness stand, nobody has ever accused either the Chicago Tribune or the Omaha World-Herald of being liberal, elitist or Eastern seaboard in its outlook-let alone of being all three at once.

The conclusions that have been reached by these two newspapers, and hy others who have been among the President's most stalwart supporters, are important for two reasons. One is that toey show signs of fuifilling ooe prerequisite of the President's removal from office under circumstances least likely to divide the country and create huge reservoirs of public acrimony, suspicion and dispute: this prerequisite is that his own

About six months ago, at a time when constituency not feel that the President has been removed by a vengeful, partisan and unjust political opposition. The second reason that these conclusions are important is that they are firmly founded on an acknowledgement of presidential wrongdoing, as distinct from heing hased only on some amorphous sense that he has been unjustly robbed by others of his capacity to lead.

Where we would differ with the Chicago Trioune's appraisal is in its apparent conclusion that the transcripts recently released hy Mr. Nixon, damning as they are, constitute a sufficiently complete or coherent statement of the case on which the President's removal must rest. Moreover, what is missing from the Tribune's recommended solution, as it is in the case of most of those who have raised their voices for the President's resignation, is any provision for the manner in which he would leave office and its aftermath for him. Former Vice-President Agnew, if we may he a bit crude ahout the transaction, bought himself (and the office he had in fact disgraced) a little necessary dignity in exchange for an official public presentation of the particular charges he would have had to answer had he not resigned. The President's case is different in some important respects—the experience of removal or resignation of a man from the presidency is by nature bound to he more traumatic, and the relatively simple format for hargaining does not exist in this case. Still, the basic ingredients are there and there are enough interested and honorable parties who have some claim to a role and some authority in these affairs to negotiate a proper outcome. That outcome, it seems to us-and we are specifically thinking of something short of the result of a fully played out impeachment process-would have roughly to provide the following elements: some form of indemnification of the President as a private citizen, some formal presentation of the reasons for his leaving office. and some acknowledgement, if only tacit, by Mr. Nixon of his acceptance of both parts of the arrangement. One thing is certain: The pressures will increase for his removal, the revelations will multiply, and the constituency will grow, Mr. Nixon's presidency is beyond recovery. That is what the transcripts-and the public reading of them-have made plain. The question is no longer whether he should be removed from office, but how and when he will go, And the answer, in large measure, is up to him.

pears to owe the fall of his Liberal party government to what he calls the "scourge of inflation." Prices in Canada have gone up 10.4 percent in a year, the same intolerable rate as the climb in the United States.

Nevertheless, it is doubtful that runaway prices alone would have brought about Mr. Trudeau's ouster. Beneath the surface It was the politics of minority government, resting in this case on the shakiest of alliances with the radical New Democratic party, that brought Mr. Trudeau down. Since the 1972 election, he has had to depend on the support of the NDP in the House of Commons in order to prevail over the combined vote of the Progressive Conservatives and the Social Credit party; and it was the NDP's opposition to the prime minister's economic program that finally forced his undoing.

The parties both to the left and to the right of the government wanted price and wage controls; the prime minister, with a possibly jaundiced eye to the American experlence, thought they would do little good. The New Democrats advocated pricing Cana-

Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau ap- dian goods for export higher than those for domestic consumption, a possible invitation to economic warfare which Mr. Trudeau understandably rejected. Where the prime minister's hudget made concessions to the left, as it dld on housing finance, the NDP found them "unworkable" or inadequate. It was the pressure of the NDP that kept the freeze on oil prices long after the Trudeau government wanted to end it. The party also was a major factor in the stiffening of controls on Amerlcan financial investments in Canada.

> Although infiation has caused real hardship for many Canadians they are not necessarily disposed to put all the hiame on the Liheral government. They mey even accept the prime minister's view that the problem is worldwide, requiring worldwide solutions. New elections are expected in July: and in any case, Wednesday's vote in Commons does not mean the exit from Canadian politics of Mr. Trudeau, who hy general consent has grown in stature during his six years in office, especially in the last 18 months under the vicissitudes of running a minority gov-

Cold War Casualty

It is ironic that Willy Brandt, the man who sought to promote detente between the Federal German Republic and East Europe. including the "other Germany," has been brought nown by a cese of espionage which fits perfectly into the patterns of a cold war that is clearly still being waged behind the mask of normalization. Whether the wirepullers in East Berlin can derive much satisfaction from the political consequences of their spectacular coup is an open questionthey may find that it will recound on themselves. Yet the degree to which Ostpolitik exposes West Germany to herm emerges cleerly.

Power of Oil

Political power, said Mao, grows out of the barrel of a gun. Last year it seemed more likely to come out of a barrel of crude oil ... It should have been the Year of Europe. It wes demonstrably not. If 1973 belonged to anyone it belonged to the Arabs-which probably surprised them as much as anyone. Perhaps we had all taken the words of Chairman Mao too literally, and too much to heart. # The Politics of Divorce in Italy

By C. L. Sulzberger

PARIS-One of the greatest strengths of the contemporary Roman Catholic Church has been its flexibility es expressed by growing willingness to recognize the wisdom of separating clerical and state affairs and by acceptance of decidedly liberal opinions among many of its prelates.

Since the papacy of John XXIII began in 1958, these trends have been marked. In southern Africa the church has taken a decisive lead in pressing for an end to racial inequality. Many of its priests have suffered for their support of the blacks.

Throughout Latin America the Catholic Church has associated itself with advanced social and political movements and opposed right-wing dictatorships, Such Cetholic leaders as the Most Rev. Helder Camara, archhishop of Recife, Brazil, are accepted symbols of this current.

The Vetican, under both Pope John and Pope Paul VI, his successor, has moved perceptibly toward formulation of its own detente with the Marxist world. It improved relations with Yugoslavia and Poland and pressed the hard-snelled Hun-garian Cardinal Mindszenty to abandon his refuge in the U.S. Embassy at Budapest, The last two pontiffs have received important Communist envoys.

Sharp Cleavage

Against this background it is difficult to comprehend the sharp cleavage between Catholic and non-Catholic parties in Italy itself, a cleavage now artificially forced by the Vatican and Its supporters. They inspired Sunday's and Monday's referendum. on whether the divorce law, enacted by parliament in 1970, should be repealed.

The issue is really whether the church in Italy should have even vestigial temporal power. In most Catholic countries such as France or Belgium-to say nothing of Czechoslovakia and Poland-the question has loog since been resolved. Even Cardinal Conway. primate of all Ireland (both North and South), favors secularication and separation of church and state.

The debate has gone on in Italy since the medieval wars of Guelf (papal maximalists) and Chibelline (for division of powers. As the lay domains of the Pope shrank to the purely token size of Vatican City, a tiny enclave inside Rome, the apparent Issue dwindled. In 1970 when the divorce law was enacted-and approved hy the constitutional court—this old quarrel seemed at last to have ended.

Unfortunately neither the entrenched Vatican bureaucracy nor its most ardent supporters accepted this decision of the Italian state. Urged on by political leaders more interested in altering the present party balance of power than they were in marital ethics, a movement was launched to demand a referendum on the law's validity. This is provided for under the constitution; and elmost three times the necessary number of signatures -

500,000—petitioned for a vote. The result has been to split the existing coalition that unearly runs the country. On one side—theoretically lavoring restoring the ban on divorce-are ine Christian Democrats. a Catholic party whose political views actually cover a broad spectrum. On the other side are their coalition partners, the Socialisis and Social Democrats, who have joined in a center-left admir.lstration but who are traditionally anti-clerical. They oppose church interference in political matters, and therefore favor divorce.

Political Problem

To make matters even more embarras-ing, the Christian Demcorats find themselves voting their enemies, the neo-Pasciri Italian Social Movement. One MSI leader has himself had two wives, one married in church, one by civil ceremony. He thus hopes to have his divorce and defeat it too.

The problem posed is almost wholly political. It has little to do with modern church practice as expressed in most countries with a largely Catholic population. But the Vatican would seem to have been pushed into a corner hy its own conservatives urged onward by some Christian Democratic leaders.

Some Stark Questions

Mr. Nixon's Judgmer

By James Reston

WASHINGTON.-In the Coogressional Giobe for June 4, 1842, the official steoographer in the House of Representatives reports John Quincy Adams as

"Mr. Adams said ... "Why, what mockery it would be for the Coostitution of the United States to say that that House should have the power of impeachment, extending even to the President of the United States himself, end yet to say that the House had not the power to obtain the evidence and proofs on which their impeachment was based. It appeared to him [Adams] equivalent to a self-evident principle. that the power of impeachment gives to the House necessarily the power to call for persons and papers." ### Federico Fellini Recaptures Past in New Film 'Amarcord'

By Thomas Quinn Curtiss

CANNES. France. May 10 (IHT). - Federico Fellini's "Amarcord" opened the 27th Cannes Film Festival last night, although it is not entered in the competition.

The film is a backward glauce at life in a seaside town in Italy as remembered by a middle-aged her husband in an adequate man. It is not an autobiography, apartment and has fewer than Fellini said at a press conference, but it might be defined as an autobiography of an attitude.

> Forty years ago, Titta, the protagonist. was an average schoolboy from a lower middle-class family. His mother was a doting, creature, his father, a gruff but kindly construction boss. His crusty old grandfather supplied the household with comic relief.

A Ceremony Titia's hometown drowed

through the silent, cold indoor months, awakening in spring when tiny tufts, known as "manine," came floating down and the efficy of winter was binned at a ceremony in the town square, Summer drew hordes of tourists to the local botel and neighboring beaches. One night, the excited townspeople went out in boats to see the transatlautic liner, Rex. flash by on its maiden voyage. That summer, too. a crazy uncle was declared cured aud brought bome. After a glass of brandy, the uncle chinhed a tree and refused to come down. pelting his family with applex and shouting that he must have a woman. Enter the straight-

Titta, like his uncle, was obsessed by the thought of women: the obese proprietress of a tobacco stall, the drab prostitute who haunted the beaches, and Gradisca, the town beauty, a hairdresser who spent her free time at the movies gaping at American movie stars.

Fall brings melancholy. Titta's mother dies unexepectedly and Gradisca, renouncing her daydreams of Gary Cooper, marries a policeman and goes to live elsewhere. Her wedding breakfast is interrupted by a downpourthat is Titta's last recollection of Pellini has not bound the sequeness together firmly-one tollows another abruptly wathout inclivation or explanation, as fragments of far-off time might leap to mind in idle remenbrance. The lack of strong continuity leads his new film an uncertain pace and occasionally he lingers too long over some passage. But such are minor flaws: Fellini remains a magician of words, pictorial composition and atmosphere. His exuberant and contagious humor brightens depressing classrooms. family squabbles and pompous officialdom_ With a few nimble strokes, Fellini pictures the innards of even the least of his characters. Without distortion or over-emphasis, he draws the background of Mussolini Italy with its strength-through-joy parades and meetings, its severe suppression of individual liberties and its hysteria over any threat or dissent as when the troops are called out to slill a photograph that is playing "The International").

Actors and non-actors are mingled in the cast. Magali Noel is the pretty, movie-struck hairdresser who in a sature realization of her fautasies achieves her ambition to become a cinema star and comports herself like Paulette Goddard, Bruno Zaulu is both amusing and touching as the youngster of 40 years ago. Pupella Maggio and Armando Brancia neathy fit their assignments as his parems. But there isn't a character, down to the passing extras, who tails to couvince.

"Amarcord" again discloses Fellini as an extraordinary artist. Perhaps no director working now can match him in making the screen come alive. A sustained rbythm is lacking in his latest picture, but this, by its nature. was inevitable. For here he seeks by the resources of his medium to recapture the essence of yesterday.

The film is now on view in Paris at the Gaumont Elysées vin Italian with French sublitless and at the Imperial the Gaumoni Brie-Gauche and the Hautefeinlle dunced into French,

'Discovering Leaves' in Senegalese Art

By Michael Gibson

PARIS, May 10 (IRT).-An exhibition of contemporary art from Senegal opened recently at the Grand Palsis (to June 24) and includes 143 works by 33 artists, 26 of whom were born after 1940.

It seems both useful and fair to point out that the show does not represent the state of Senegalese or African culture but that it offers, with possible exceptions, a panorama of African ertists working in a Western There is nothing new about individual artists working in the framework of a culture that is not natively their own, and nothing reprehensible about it either. But they remain individuals and cannot be taken to express anything specific to the culture of their country of origin. Like so many African countries, Painting a picture or shaping a sculpture seems a very obvious act to any of us, and we usually concentrate on what the individual work is "about" rather than on the significance our culture attributes to the act of applying color to a rectangular surface or forming a three-dimensional figure. Yet the meaning of the act depends entirely on the terms to which any given culture has come with its own imagination and on the form taken by its inherent mysticism, the unutterable foundations of its identity in the cosmos.

It is, for instance, the trivial heritage of a Puritan ethic that the scene set before one's eyes: the criterion of good art is "Truth." An artist working with this in mind will have an entirely different conception of the world than that held by a Renaissance painter or a Greek sculptor, neither of whom considered truth to reside in factual representa-

And again, an artist working in a Moslem context will have to come to terms with religious principles that must be a source of conflict for him, while another whose people believe in spirits (whether ancestors or natural forces) will be striving in yet another direction, even if he himself lives in a purely secular

Because an idiom implies an outlook and if the outlook is not specifically his own the artist must either inflect the idiom to his own purpose, or enter wholeheartedly into the outlook it imposes upon him. hand, uses characteristic African material, such as masks and statues, works them into a two-dimensional pattern or structure and shapes them into a personal idiom. Seck is a gifted artist and perhaps the most "African" in the show, not because he uses traditional forms, but because he succeeds in using the abstract vocabulary of forms to communicate in a language that is intelligible to us, the specific "otherness" of the African world, "I am no longer what I used to be." his mask figures seem to say, "but I am not like you. I live within the forms of my heritage. and while its deeper qualities may escape you, they subsist behind the power of the masks."

The Serère tradition speaks of snake-bodied spirits called Pangols, sometimes beneficent, sometimes malevolent. They are not depicted, although they may be signified by an object. Philippe Sene, 25, has chosen them for his subject and portrays them as soft-fleshed forms done in sensitively toned gousches. Cheik Diop, 56, uses the lost-wax technique of his native region to produce rather large sculptures of the historical figures of Senegal. The rearing horses and brandished swords call to mind the rhetoric of European public squares, but the modeling and the texture are those of the traditional objects that have long been made in this way.

Ousseynou Ly, 31, also known as Fidèle Artiste, has some sensitively expressive, fine-lined drawings that successfully con-vey, for instance, the power and mystery of tall, thick-limbed trees, without letting the subject dominate the quality of the style. M'Bor Faye, 74, is a true naif painter with spontaneous mastery of bold, simple forms and straightforward color. Cherif Thiam, Diatta Seck, Amadon Wade Sarr, Daouda Diouk and Ansouma Diedhou would also deserve atten-

Many of the other artists, however, despite their formal and technical ability, present us with works that are derivative, clichéridden, rhetorical and hollow.

A tapestry by Amadou Seck in current Paris exhibition.

One talks of cultural colonialism and I think these are its observable results.

I remember a sentence, from a book whose title I can't recall, of an African speaking to European and saying: build your houses out of stone because the leaves in your country are not as beautiful as in ours." Despite the speaker's ignorance of weather conditions farther North, there is a sweet wisdom in what he says. Can African artists shut their eyes to the stones of Europe? Can they venture far into their own selves to discover the leaves of their own country? What an suthentically African art will ultimately turn out to be is much of a mystery to me, and I suspect it is one to the African artists themselves

Among the other current exhibitions in Paris are:

Miró, Galierie Melki, 55 Rus de Seine, Paris 6, to July 9. This excellent selection of Miró's work between 1925 and 1960 serves to herald the big Miro show opening next week at the Grand Palais. It includes paintings, graphics, books and assem-blages, some familiar and important works, and since they are not labelled "collection parti-culière" it means, if you can afford a Miro, they are for sale.

Nalard, Galerie Jeanne Bûchcz, 53 Rue de Seine, Paris 6, to

Louis Nallard's painting is hard to define. It is complex, nonrepresentational, overcast with a golden-brown shadow, sober, impenetrable, thickly impastoed. It requires looking at for a long time. It is not everybody's friend. Something of a heavy diet, perhaps, but worthy of respect.

Paults there are—the play is as generous with words as too long—it runs for 3 1 2 hours with startling effects. Here, with a short intermission—and some of the ventures into Hollywood musical don't work, especially the use of a Gershwin pseudospiritual to suggest spiritual release. But, alded by director. Terry Hands and designer Farrah. Mr. Barnes has attempted a work of unmense scale and, for most of the time, succeeds. It is funny and sharp and stimulating, a gigantic, giorlnus galifmanity of a play,

> No one could accuse Jason Miller of taking risks, His "That Championship Season" with an all-American cast has opened at shock to find a young writer who has taken no notice of any the-atrical developments of the last 30 years, who can turn out a slick efficient three-act meiodrama of such an old-fashioned kind.

It is difficult to square the play's American reputation-a run of more than 800 performances in New York, a Tony award as best play, the New York Critics' Award and a Pulitzer prize-with this raucously conventional work ex-posing the effect of a dubious ethic-"win at all costs"-on the lives of a championship hasketball team 25 years on, facing middleaged failure.

On this side of the Atlanlic, the play seems hysterical as the characters' petty corruptions are revealed, each spaced out over the evening to provide strong endings to each act. All the

the slightest frustration, they scream, yell, fight or threaten to kill each other.

Of its melodramatic kind, "That Championship Season' is an accomplished piece of work, often lunny; but it is also shallow, shrill and predictable. A.J. Antoon's direction is effective sodaggressive. Members of the cast. headed by Broderick Crawford as the coach, a sentimental bigot, act their parts well but cannot be anything other than stereotypes.

The British obsession with middle-class family life continues to dominate theater. At the National, John Hopkins's "Next of Kiu" gets the whole clan together -mother, her children, their wives and husbands and their children-and then charts sudden disintegration when one, the favorite son, walks out,

As in "That Championship Scason," there are revelations of betrayals. But Mr. Hopkins is far more subtle. Mr. Miller's characters all talk to each other in the same tone of voice-derived from old Hollywood movies-while Mr. Hopkins's change and shift, according to whom they re speak-

"Next of Kin" is somewhat obsessional-11, too, is overloug and worries away at its theme with dogged inlensity. But mostly it is a fascinating and moving account of people trapped by domestic circumstances with a fine performance from Gemma Jones as the deserted water struggling to maintain self-control. Harold Pinter directs perceptively.

Alan Ayckbourn's "Table Manners' at the Greenwich Theatre uses similar material-an attempted affair between a giri and her brother-in-law—10 great comic effect. It is a slight play, not as interesting as his "Absurd Person Singular," but continually amusing, particularly during a family meal when everyone pledges to be nice to each other and at once start quarrelling over the sealing arrangements.

Mr. Arckbourn likes to set himsell difficult technical problems and this play is the first of a trilogy covering the same events but from a different room. Thus. the second play is set in the living room and the third in the garden so that what happens off-stage in one play is on-stage in the next.

Oo the evidence of the first of the sequence, this results in a thinning of narrative. There are gaps in the play-one character getting drunk off-stage and obviously misbehaving-that in other circumstances would have been filled in. But an excellent rast-Toni

Music in Italy: Florence Festival Opens

By William Weaver

PLORENCE, May 10 (IHT) -Though Florence's Teatro Communale has been without an artistic director and without a general manager for some time the theater's organization has miraculously put together a fairly impressive program for the 37th edition of the Maggio Musicale, the tradi-tional, prestigious Florentine Iestival. II opened last night with a revival of Gaspare Spontini's 'Agnese di Hohenstaufen," a suitable choice for this Spontini centenary year, which has already witnessed other important Spontini performances, including his "Fernando Cortez" (IRT, Feh. 5).

Like "Cortez," written for the French court, this "Agnese" is a ceremonial opera, first composed as part of a wedding celebration in Berlin, in 1829, where Spontini was official composer to the Prussian court. It is a long, solemn, rich work, and to succeed nowadays it requires not only a first-rate cast, but also a penetration of the composer's particular, quirkish style, neither Italian, nor French, nor German, but a confluence of all three, where Beethoven and Rossini seem to meet, in perfect harmony.

It cannot be said this Florence revival met these requirements. The singing was never better than adequate, and not often that. In the title role. Leyla Gencer was barely audible; even her vaunted temperament seemed in abeyance, and she did little more than mark the role. The other female part, that of Agnese's mother, lay a hit high for mezzo-soprano Joy Davidson, though she had some good momehts. The tenor Veriano Luchetti was also miscast and tended to force his naturally sweet voice.

As the emperor, Mario Petri looked regal, but his concept of the part belonged to a later part of the 19th century; at times, be seemed 10 bc singing Boris Godunov. The smaller roles were generally well assigned. The chorus, a vital element in this plece, was frequently hesitant, ten-

All in all, the reading was not coherent. Riccardo Muti, who conducted a radio performance ni "Agnese" four years ago, clearly knows and admires the score, and there were patches of brilliance in his reading. But he was unable to pull it all together, to impose a vision. One missed that clear sense of musical architecture that so distinguished his "William Tell" here in Floreuce a few years ago.

Some elements of Corrado Cagil's sets (notably a lovely, leafy scrim! and some of his costumes were individually handsome, but again one missed a unifying vision. Under the circumstances, the director, Franco Enriquez, did what he could: he moved the chorus with skill and he generally kept the principals static.

The Maggio's opening, then, was a respectable, ralber than exciting event.

Citroën Expects 'Difficult' Year

Citroen expects Difficult Lear

Citroen expects to report a profit in 1973 but is admittedly in the midst of a "difficult" 1974, a company source reports. The energy crisis and higher gasoline prices have damaged siles of the larger, high-powered cars for which the company is known, and this is the year that was previously planned for heavy capital outlays and expenses for moving into new plants, the aide says. "We aren't sitting on a mattress of gold, but we aren't in a desperate position at all." the but we aren't in a desperate position at all," the spokesman adds, specifically danying French press reports that the company is interested in selling out to the state-owned Renault or to any other company.

Motorola says it has advised Zenith that discussions for the purchase of the facilities "therefore wouldn't be productive." Motorola sais Zenith is "the dominant manufacturer of home television receivers in the United States."

"I can't develop any gut feeling over whether loan demand is actually tapering off based on the latest week's figures," said one government securities trader. "Any trend would require three or four weeks of coofirmation," Analysts are watching loan demand figures closely for signs that business borrowing is indeed slow-ing. The President's action expands a program initiated tast January, wheo the Department of Housing and Urban Development committed over $6 billion to mortgage subsidies in an effort to sour construction of 200.000 new homes.

The President sald the money supplied to the savings and loan institutions would be provided by the Treasury under its stendby loan authority.

"An increase in federal borrowing of $10 billion would simply drive up interest rates even more and divert more funds from thrift institutions. which are alread; losing deposits because of the increase in market interest rates."

Sen. Proximire said the best solution is to reduce the federal budget for 1975 by 89 billion. This would balance the oudget

Jevel off.

HOT SPRINGS, Va., May 10 and fuel prices is expected to (AP-DJ) .- The economic consultants to the Business Council predicted today that for 1974 as a whole the economy will show no real growth over 1973. The economists, who are employed hy the major corporations which make up the council, said in their economic outlook that the real gross national product for the year will be at or slightly below the 1873 level. Real GNP measures the economy's total output of goods and services after removing the effects of inflation. Real GNP actually declined at a 5.8 percent annual rate in the first quarter this year. The Business Council economists said they expect some improvement in economic growth during tha second half of 1974, but that would not be enough to offset a likely decline for the first half.

the nation's unemployment rate in the fourth quarter of this year will be close to 6 percent com-pared with the present 5 perceot. The Business Council group ex-

THE story goes that Charles Maurice de Talleyrano-Perigord was once asked by hila barber, "You have had all pos-sible titles: bishop, minister. prince. What do people call you when they talk about you?" To "Nothing good," As apocrypha am suftering the tortures of the damned." To which the king retales illustrate the disesteem that has attacked Talleyrand almost from the outset of his extraorolmary career, for he was one of those guileful manipulators who served many masters but made few friends, and who could nonetheless jest about his hifamies. Only Talleyrand could have remarked, after he had scuttled Napoleon for Louis XVIII, that "treason is merely a matter of dates." An inveterate schemer, britliantly resilient, mimoral and amoral. Talleyrand was not a person to argue that ethics and statesmanship had anything in common. As he teld Adolphe Thiers two years before he died. "Remember, dear fellow, that for 40 years I was the most morally discredited man in Europe, vet I was all-powerful in the 'French' government or on the threshold of it." A man so commendably lacking in illusions about himself and his success certainly descrives a wry and witty biography-one that states the Talleyrand care

This advocacy. which strikes a jarringly sycophantic note, fails in any event to rehabilitate Tallegrand, who does not require that so much as he needs to be understood and appreciated in the light of his "He made them haten " writes

With his eye on the main chance, he supported the revolution and put aside his mitre, a step that was to create a problens with Rome when later he married a mistress and still later when he sought absolution on his deathbed. For the moment, though, he was active in the early stages of the revolution and was marked as a man to be watched. More moderate than Robespierre, Talleyrand left France during the Jacobin regime, spent time 'n the United States as a land speculator and returned to Paris under the Directory. By wire-pulling and flattery he became Napoleon's foreign minister and with minor absences, remained at that nost through the Bourbon restoration and into the 1830s.

His monument was the concert of Europe, which was established by the Congress of Vienna. This concert aimed essentially to preserve monarchical legitimacy and to hold back the tides of change generated by the French revolution. It was remarkably successful until accumulated popular pressure shattered the grand design in the revolution of 1848. As France's negotiator at Vienna, Talleyrand did exceedir ly well. Although the final agreement provided some penalties and loss of territory. France survived to become part of the European eyetem of uation-states, Later Talleyrand came to identify himself with Prance, excusing his expedlency as patriotism. It was a rationalization not difficult to formulate at the conclusion of a life filled with riches and honors and good living.

Talleyrand-and this one must admire about him-never stinted himsel in wordly pleasures, His chef at one time was the great Marie-Autoine Carème, and his mistresses were the most delectoperating kickback schemes, he managed to outwit scandal for his audacity was even more mar-lot about the presidential ed them." I said. transcripts now, but we still do not know much as to how ther were transcribed. A friend of mine who was at the White House told me the story involved with getting out the 1,254 pages and 200,000 words in time for the Presfdeot's speech oo the night of April 29. a Monday. This, according to him, is what happened. "We got the word on Friday that the President had decided to turn over traoscripts of the tapes to toc House Judiciary

Buchwald Committee and the call went out for 30 secretaries who could type and listen to tapes at the same

"Why didn't they ask Rose Mary Woods to transcribe them?"

"She's not very good at using a tape machine. And we didn't want to 20 through that whole dreary explanation again about why long portions of the tape

"Did you hurt her feelings when you told her she couldn't do it?"

"She was rather milled as list. but to make it up to her we let her type the speech the President gave on TV explaining why the transcripts would show he was inneceot."

"So theo what happened!" "We set up a room in the bottom of the White House with tape machines, typewriters, coffee and

"We explained to the girls that they were part of history and what they typed on the weckend could make or break the Presicent of the United States."

Storey Wins N.Y. Award NEW YORK, May 10 (AP) -"The Contractor" by David Storey was picked yesterday by the Nev-Work Drama Critics Circle as the best play of the 1973-74 season. The award was the second in a row for the English author, cited by the group last year for "The Changing Room.

"We told them that they would he locked in for the weekend and work eight-hour shifts. We had set up cots in John Dean's old office where they could eatch up on sleep when they weren't work-

"Dean would have liked that," I said.

"The first shift started typing at midnight on Friday. In the beginning the girls thought it would be a lark, but, as they started listening to the tapes, some of them west white. Oor girl said to me: This must be the wrong tape. Someone's cursing on it.' I told her it was the right tape and that the voice they heard was the President cursing She didn't believe me and thought I was loking so I made a speech to all the girls. . . .

"I told them they would hear a lot of foul language on the tapes, but these were really code words the President used for national security reasons. I instructed them to type in an 'expletive deleted or an 'inaudible when they heard a bad word. Otherwise the Russians would be able to break our code."

"They accepted that?" I asked. "They did at first, but proby soon it started to get to them. Several of them broke down and started to cry, so we had to send in new girls every half-hour. The language was too much for them.

"One girl said: 'It isn't the "expletives" or the "inaudibles" that bother me. I've heard them hefore. But it's the "unintelligibles" that I just can't take."

"By Saturday afternoon, the girls were refusing to type the transcripts and I was starting to worry. Theo I got a brilliant idea if I must say so myself."

"What did you do?" "I called up Billy Graham and asked him if he would come right over. He din end I explained the problem to him. He understood it right away and said he would

"How?"

"He gave absolution to all line girls transcribing the tapes. He also told them, If God dido't want a President to curse he would have never created Sony recording machines,"

Mary Blume-

'Once I became aware of the seemingly boundless incompetence of others, I traded on it by anticipating and reversing the ordinary procedure—by complaining first, then sending order and payment.'

The Fine Art of Complaining

STUNNED and weary as New Yorkers are, they are still supreme at making the best of a bad thing. Accommodation has gone so far that one of the season's big exhibitions, Manhattan's salon de printemps, as it were, was a show on city crime, with showcases full of burglar alarms, sonic devices and bullet-proof glass, and chicly audio-visual demonstrations of congames, auto thefts and general advice on how not to be victimized, burglarized, mugged, raped or robbed. The show was sponsored not by the Metropolitan Museum's Thomas Hoving, who probably wishes he'd thought of it, but by the Police Department, and it got a rave from The

New York Times. Do New Yorkers despair of cleaning up Times Square? Not a bit of it. A plan has been offered to fill it with gambling spots, perhaps on the theory that had money drives out worse money. "We don't waot anything cheap," one of the promoters is quoted as saying. "We want the best kind of Les Vegas-type casinos."

Recently published books also reflect a determination to make the best of a rotten atuation. One can for example buy "A Consumer Guide to Food Additives." which might have been subtitled "Name Your Poison," and there is also "You Can Profit From a Monetary Crisis' by Harry Brown, author in 1970 of "How You Can Profit From the Coming Devaluation."

A Survivor

New Yorkers who need a day or two to recover can attend "a weekend in Gestalt organismic activist therapy for improved here and now functioning." But those who believe that nothing will function here or now, or for that matter sooner or later, might well want to stay home and read the tale of a triumphant survivor, "How I Turn Ordinary Complaints Into Thousands of Dollars: The Diary of a Tough Customer" by Ralph Charell. Like everyone, Charell has been faced with shoddy goods, indifferent service and the tedium of daily ripoffs. But he is the sort of man who, when the family washing machine springs a leak and needs a 10-cent piece of new tubing, complains so effectively that he not only gets the tubing but a brand new washing machine, Charell has also won apologies and or reimbursements from Con Ed. Ma Bell, Hertz car rentals (twice). Saks Fiftin Avenue (twice) and he got $335 from his brokerage house, Dean Witter, after they failed to order 10 lots of March polatoes on the date Charell had specified (for unbelievers, photocopies of checks and letters are included in the book).

Charell insists that he does not allempt to profit from his skill as a complainer but is merely defending himself against H world of "short weights, squeiched selfesteem and numberless social moggings." As a successful complainer (recognized says his book's cover, as the world's most successful complainer in the "Guinness Book of World Records"). Charell has plenty of self-esteem and a very refined technique: he bow complains first and orders later. As he writes:

Anticipation

"Once I became aware of the seeminging boundless moompetence of others, I traded on it by anticipating and reversing the ordinary procedure—by complaining first, then sending order and payment."

The jacket photograph reveals Chareil to be a youngish man with a fixed stare and a slightly smur smile. The copy below says be graduated from Columbia Law School and is in broadcasting. One of his standard ploys is to open his telephoned complaint with the words, "I usually bill between $100 and $150 per hour and there is oo way I can break even on this trans-In time says Charell ne came to believe that his time was really worth that much.

Occasionally, Charell goes too far. When he rightly berated a taxi driver for overcharging for the run from Kennedy Airport to Charell's Manhattan flat, the driver executed a neat and illegal U-turn in front of Charell's door, drove toward Kennedy like fury and dumped Charell and his luggage somewhere in the swampy reaches around the airport.

But usually he hits it just right. For example, he orders a $280 koala bear from Steuben Glass, to be delivered by a certain date on the West Coast. The bear arrives late. Chare'l launches into a complaint, Result: He is reimbursed $250 and is also allowed to keep the belated bear.

Eviction Notice

Charell's chutzpah reached its acme when he received an eviction notice: his building in Manhattan's East 80s and five surrounding buildings were to be demolished and replaced by a huge cooperative

The maneuvers over relocation and setilements are too loog to be recounted here. but one can only admire Charell's nerve when late in the negotiations, when after nearly all line other tenants had left and the wrecker's ball was already knocking a: neighboring buildings, he had a piano delivered for his young deughter:

"The effect of moving a pizno into a 10-story building in which only three tenants lived can only be conjectured, but we thought it would be helpful," he writes. The case ended with Charell getting H $25,000 scttlement from his old landlord, who also picked up Charell's hotel bill for the week prior to relocation and even made improvements to the family's new apartment. The new apartment, by the way, was even without the improvements, better than the last one and when Charell's daughter's plane got damaged in transit, he of course attacked he movers to get money for that as well. Charell has certain tips for would-be complainers: use top quality writing paper (he likes Tiffany's ecru with kid finish) and do not use a lawyer unless absolutely necessary, Further tips can be learned by ordering Charei's book for $6.95 from his publisher, Stein and Day in New York. But remember first to complain about not getting the book, then send your check. As Stein and Day's own Ralph Charell says, complain now, pay and order later.
